

SLIDERS

SLIDE EFFECTS

Production Notes from the set of "SLIDERS"

- Here's a funny coincidence regarding the name of the newest "Sliders" character, Colin Mallory, Quinn's brother. Kari Wuhrer's (Maggie) co-host on MTV's "Remote Control" was Colin Quinn, currently a cast member on "Saturday Night Live."
- Cleavant Derricks' character is nicknamed "Crying Man" for the real tears he sheds during his performance. Derricks, in fact, is a professional singer and a Tony Award winner for his role in the hit Broadway musical "Dreamgirls."
- At times when the script calls for the Sliders to duel with an opponent, viewers may be surprised at their expert execution. Jerry and Charlie O'Connell have extensive training in fencing. They were members of New York University's saber fencing team. In addition, Charlie won an NCAA Gold Medal in fencing in 1996.
- For the episode, "Electric Twister Acid Test," Jerry O'Connell reunites with "Stand by Me" co-star, actor Corey ~~Haim~~ Feldman, and performs the same special handshake they shared in that movie.
- The climactic fire scene from "The Fire Within" episode was filmed at Universal's "Backdraft" attraction at the Universal Studios ~~themepark~~ tour.
- In "The Fire Within," Jerry quips, "~~I'm~~ spraying for cockroaches" -- a not-so veiled reference to the film he starred in, "Joe's Apartment." with thousands of roaches
- The episode "Slither" mirrors Kari Wuhrer's 1997 feature film "Anaconda" about killer snakes possessing super intelligence.
- The episode title "El Sid" is an anagram for 'slide.'
- JODSers have appeared all over the Internet. They are members of the Jerry O'Connell Drooler Society fanclubs.
